When adding a new handguard to their rifles, consumers usually take the next step of adding iron sights onto their increased rail space, thanks to the expanded sight radius offered by the new forearm. Now, Brownells packages these two upgrades into one, combining the Midwest Industries AR-15 Slim Line Handguard with Midwest's Flip-Up Combat Sights. The Midwest Industries Slim Line Handguard provides AR owners with three rows of M-LOK attachment points, as well as a continuous flattop Picatinny rail running along the top of the forearm. The handguard can be had in 9.25-, 10.5-, 12.625-, 14-, and 15-inch lengths that correspond with many of today's popular barrel lengths for AR-style rifles and pistols. Each handguard is attached to the upper receiver through the company's 4140 heat-treated barrel nut. Combined with these handguards is the Midwest Industries AR-15 Flip-Up Combat Sights. These sights can be had in either 1.5-MOA or 2-MOA adjustments at the front post, while the rear aperture offers 0.5-MOA adjustments. When not in use, the sights fold flat on the rail and when up, they provide shooters with a common, recognizable and easily used A2-style sight picture.
